and I'll try to be a better boy this afternoon. But uh we accomplished a lot to help you get started. And I may sound like a politician. When I get started talking (not clear) I hope I didn't work too hard at it.

(Participant, man:) Well me being a farmer you see I don't get these coffee breaks. SO I've enjoyed it.. Laughter.

Mr. Clement: No, I would just like to say this and of course I talked to Mr. Tompkins about this over the phone. I think right now we're sitting here with a program of great potential. The slicker we can make this thing work the better. THe more apt on the next go round you are to get participants. I think it's a wonderful program for Indian people. I mean it, great potential and you wind up with something. It's not like the conventional home where you pay rent for 30 years and don't have anything. This is his. He owns it. ANd uh..uh..I think possibly a participant meeting would be real good. Stress upon him some of the responsibilities again now that we're coming into this thing. 'Cause let's hope by the time that warm weather gets here well we can start buying bricks and digging up dirt.

(Participant, man:) (not clear) this project because most Americans are more or less transient in their jobs. They buy a home sure pay a tremendous amount for it. And with not the intention of living there the rest of their lives like these people are but uh they get a marketable situation and they're ready to exchange again or resell it. ANd buy another home somewhere else. Whereas in this case these people intend to cherish it as their home. Permanent (not clear)

MR. Clement: And course we are setting a pattern I mean (not clear) like your last resolution where you requested these additional houses. The quicker we can get these under way and get the houses built well you've solved the problem. W want to move out of there.

(Participant, man:) and then we'll be ready to proceed on. I think it's going to be fantastic when we get some houses we can look at.
