

WOOD TICKS AND DOGS AND CATS

Way back in there, the ticks are sure bad.

(Wonder where all the--all those tick come from.)

You know, there's not too much stock water. They used to go down the ground and live, I guess.

(I guess so.)

Yeah, you take them old big ones, call them--they the ones produce the little ones.

(Yeah.)

Boy, when you mash one of them, and, boy, just be oodles of them.

(Hum. Yeah, they're sure getting to be bad in some places.)

Uh-huh, I've got quite a few cats, and I guess most of mine's coming from them.

(I guess so.)

I had a dog, but he took a notion to want to stay back up here at the neighbor.

(Uh-huh.)

Well, we're not exactly neighbors, but I know them. He taken up over there. He was a good squirrel dog.

(Uh-huh.)

Good watch dog. They had a bunch of little old she dogs. He's taken up over there. And I went and got him, tied him up. He pulled the ring out of his collar and got loose.

(Went back over there.)

Uh-hum. I just left him alone.

SQUIRREL HUNTING

(Do you still have squirrel hunting like they used to here?)
