

My daddy used to tell me when you get a chill like that, get scared you know, there's something around.

(Uh-huh)

He always told me that. I guess he knows.

(Well, now tonight I'll go the way of Hulbert.) (Laughter)

Well, you might not see anything.

(But, you know, I don't think they would bother me, whatever it is.)

Maggie: No, if you don't believe in it--He don't bother nobody, but you still see something.

Maggie: No, just like Bonny Jo used to say, "Ah shoot! I don't believe in no ghosts, you know. I been there many times." She said one night when they come back for her girl friend, I don't know who she was staying all night with and she said that girl saw one and had a blanket on her head. It was squatted down right there where Bonney Jo parked her car. Bonny Jo didn't see it, her girl friend the one seen it. As soon as they come in the house they told Bonney. Bonney, did you see that? Said what? She said I seen somebody had a sheet over 'em. Bonney said probably Mama. I said, Ah shoot, (laughter) (not clear) knock me in the head. Sure enough that girl seen somebody right in our yard. When we was sleeping here in the (not clear). They say if you don't believe it, you know, when they tell you they won't play with you. Yeah, if you don't attention to 'em, you know, something like that they won't bother you.

(Hooley) Look at that they're beating that nigger up. (T.V.)

Maggie: Just trust the Lord. When I go anywhere, I just ask Him to take care of me. Because they--
