

(Do they still use that place?)

Oh, yeah, oh, yeah, they going to have decoration next Sunday.

(Stomp grounds up here, they've had that a long time, haven't they?)

Uh-huh.

(That's been there for years and years. Did they have that one there when you was a little fellow?)

No, no, I was pretty near grown when they started this stomp dance.

(Where did they have it before that?)

Down by the Creek Nation.

(Oh, way down there.)

Way down there. That celebration dance on the old Redbird Smith place.

STOMP DANCE TO CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY FOR REDBIRD SMITH

(Redbird Smith.)

They going to have meeting up there the seventeenth of this month, I think.

(May seventeenth.)

Yeah. July nineteenth, they're going to have a big stomp dance over there.

(July nineteenth.)

They have every year, you know.

(Yeah.)

That's Chief Redbird Smith's birthday, you know.

(Well.)

Celebrate.

(Yeah. Celebrate his birthday.)

(Words to children irrelevant) Stoke Smith is (words not clear).

(Yeah, Stoke Smith is getting to be quite an old man, but they sure--everybody respects him though. They look to him. Well, his daddy Redbird Smith told him all about the stomp dance ritual and program. Who's the leader up
