

And one day this old lady, he happened to see a house so he was scared, he went over there and peeped in the house. Said, "I wonder where this cute little boy came from." Said, "I'd sure like to catch him." So she tried every way to catch this little boy. One day she caught him. She turned herself into a rock, stick. So this time this little boy went in there. He was hoping to find something to eat, I guess and he went in there and this rock was that lady, that lady that lived there." So she put out some bread and some food on the table and this little boy went over there and he got what he wanted to eat and he was going back out and this lady came back from a rock into herself. So she said, "Where's your mother?" "Don't you have a mother?" Said, "Yes. I'll take you over there. I'll show you where she lives." So she went out there and here was mother. She had been dead for several days and he was still nursing on her. So this old lady said, "That's not good for you, you better come and stay with me." She said, "I'll make lot of play things for you if you stay with me." She was lonely lady anyway. So she made him a ragball, first thing. Said, "Now there's some rules to go by this ragball." "Now don't you go and do what I tell you not to do." She said, "Don't throw this ball, ragball up in the air over the house." Well, she did, she made the ball and she gave it to him. And he said, "I wonder why that old lady told me not to do that?" Said, "I'll just try and do it." So he thre it over the house. And it rolled back down and there was two boys. There two boys came down when that ball hit the ground. And he said, "I've got another boy here, grandma." She said, "Did you throw that ball up in the air over my house?" Said, "Yes." "I told you not to." She think it change, change this ball into, change this thing. So this time she made, she said, "Well just keep that boy and you play together." And i'll make you all a wagon." Now this time when I say don't do this, now
