

(Well, did she cure you of this stroke?)

Yeah, I had uh...

(Is it all right to talk about this?)

Paralysis of the face and of the throat. I guess it's all right to talk, to tell about.

(Okay)

(I want to hear about it since it's all right.)

(Sentence not clear) Her medicine was these two boys that, I think it was, what do you call, power as you said. (Unidentified voice, "Spears")

Was this ball she had, had power in. And I had this stroke.

(Carl) Magic power that's what it is.

Magic power? And, should I tell her name or not? No, I better not.

(Let's not, let's wait, we'll check it out later.)

Well, that was her power of curing people with stroke and paralysis, stroke. She build this little fire or pot. And she didn't use peyote at all, I don't think. And she, her husband came and prayed to our god then, she rubbed little hide on my face. After she heat it on them coals, those cedar wood. And I had this sickness, I couldn't hold water in my mouth. And I couldn't breath and I couldn't taste. Everything taste velvety. And with this power she had, well it cured me, I can drink water now without running out of my mouth.

(Was it, a twist up your face or something?)

It hold it towards my face to the back of my head.

(Did it feel funny in any particular way?)

Uh-huh. It felt real funny. And you want to drink water and you can't drink it, it pours it out, of your mouth.

(How did it feel when she cured you?)
