

Ghost Dance. Among the few Cheyennes that was in that Ghost Dance. He always wore that "Messiah chapeau"--whatever you call it--it was kind of a felt hat. He always wore that. And he worked at Darlington, and I worked with him at Darlington. And he took me for a son. Because I help his son marry this Mary Bent. Gordon Roman Nose married her. So, because of that, they adopted me, him and his wife. And when Gordon died, then Mary became a widow. Gordon was Henry's stepson. And then his stepson died and Mary had to go back to her folks, the George Bents, at Carnegie. And Henry moved out there and then he quit this Ghost Dance and he went to peyote.

(Some reminiscing, hardly intelligible, over some Cheyenne family relationships)

Ralph: John Roman Nose married Nona. Nona's my cousin. They had children. One was named Fred Roman Nose. I and him was just like brothers. I got a picture of his daughter, the girl. And they believe in them tradition ways. Fred Roman Nose's daughter is Freda. She dances. Is head dancer. Freda Roman Nose. I had known Old Man Roman Nose. Maspie. I was a boy, but I knew some of the old people (recites some names which are difficult to hear)....Little Elk, and Old Man Hicks, and White Buffalo, Stinger and Little Horse--Little Hawk--Blanche Roman Nose is married to Fred Roman Nose. Freda's her daughter. When he died she married that preacher man's boy at Carnegie--Paul Bichinen.

(Did Old Man Roman Nose ever live at where the park is now?)

STORY OF HOW CHEYENNES KILLED PAT HENNESSEY AND TWO OTHER FREIGHTERS

Ralph: He lived beyond that--behind that canyon. There was a camp there. They started from there. This was during the summer. They had a camp. Pat Hennessey was a man who was pretty rough. He was a freighter from Caldwell (Kansas). A white man. Had wagons. If he'd see an Indian, he'd shoot him. So, in our camp, they were going to look for him. The crier announce it around the camp. He went around. (Cheyenne sentence) Go on warpath--cal for volunteers--participants. He started from there. His name is Little Hand. There was Little
