

is on there. And that one of Mom's children by Dollar, Ablisine. Ought to have had these books out looking at them. But I never thought of it. There's Mary Pooler's, it's payment of the Miami's. Miami's was the 13th day of November, 1890. And that was the last payment that they got.

Bob: Does it say how much it was, Rosie?

Yeah. I think it does. Now, let me see. I thought it said there, 13th day of November 1890, last payment. I guess maybe it don't. Four hundred, ain't it?

Bob: Yes, there's four hundred right there.

Right there said per head, ain't it.

Bob: Yes.

Per head, four hundred. That's what it was. And that was the last payment they got until they sold their surplus land. And then when they sold the surplus land course they got paid for that. But--well, that Os-a-wat-uh-mee that's where Grandpa Sharkey started his store and post office was in Os-a-wat-uh-mee, Kansas. Uh-huh. Os-a-wat-uh-mee, Kansas. And then they come down here to Seneca, Missouri. There's Minnie Spanuka and her name's Pearl.

Bob: Uh-huh. You can trace her child.

Now here's, that must not be the last payment cause here's a payment here that was made May 29, in '91. And it was 475 dollars, wasn't it?

Per head. See

Bob: Yeah.

I wonder how they come. And there's George --

Bob: George Leonard.

Uh-huh. There's a boy, wasn't it November 28, 1891. Uh-huh. And Louise Seehey. Oh there's a lot of history in these books. If a person would
