

wonder sometimes. I sit here and watch it. Why is anyone so dumb to sit and watch something like that that can't talk back to you. (laughter) Sometimes it looks silly to me. When I'm here by myself I sit there and watch that thing, I think to myself, "That's about the dumbest thing I ever seen a person do. Sit and look at something like that." And you can't talk to it. Now it wouldn't to you, would it?

(I don't watch television either.)

No, I don't. I don't watch it very much but when I do I sit here and I think about that. Just what good do you get out of it. Course everyone got one. Most everyone has. And I enjoy it sometimes when I'm by myself, you know. But I don't listen to it too much. I've got a great grandson that's graduating down there at Norman. He's getting his master degree. Stillwater?

(Speaker -- not clear,)

Well, at uh -- he's getting his Master's Degree this month, I don't know whenever it is. 25th, I believe. And his wife she's getting her degree down there too. I'm kinda proud of them. I'd like to go and see them graduate. But I don't think I'll make it.

(Conversation in background -- Interruption)

And the kids used to sneak off and go down to that orchard, you know.

(At Chilocco.)

At Chilocco. And boys and girls get down there you know. And they was always a watching you know to see if anyone would catch them. If they'd catch them. They'd spank them, you know. We'd have a lot of fun down there. And we'd eat them green apples and it's a wonder that it didn't make us sick. But it never did hurt us. And even though it was, I don't know, just a talking and having a lot of fun just like a bunch of kids
