

Yeah, old lady.

(Well, they used to have women come in, sort of like midwife?)

Yeah.

(They use their grandmother or something that had helped deliver a lot of babies.)

Yeah. Uh-huh. That's the kind.

(And then later on he died and you got married again.)

Uh-huh. December 15th, 19th, 30th--30th when he died. And I married again. -- 1931.

(Then how many did you have by him?)

Five.

(Five?)

Uh-hum.

(You got a good family.)

Yeah. I would have if, plenty of them if all were living.

(Uh-hum. Well, now, just that first baby you lost, was it summer complaint or just diarrhea and a fever?)

Uh-hum.

(Was there any kind of medicine you could give them when they had that?)

Yes.

(What was it?)

I was taking him to a doctor at Tahlequah. His name was Doctor Barnes. He's really good doctor, still didn't cure it.

(It still didn't cure it.)

Uh-hum. One reason, I guess that's what /words not clear/ passed away.

He had too many tomatoes and little boy took him to garden you know.

And I guess he ate too many tomatoes. And then tomatoes was hot, you know. That's how come she--

(Yeah, made him sick. And he never did get well.)

Uh-huh.
