

won't need any--our Choctaw language. 'Cause that's why we educating our Indian children to compete with the white people. Now, I'll say one thing about--whenever the first white man came-- This is just a story. He wanted to buy a piece of land. So this Indian said "I can't sell you that land." He said, "Will you sell me a piece of land just about the size of a cowhide?" The Indian looked at him and kinda laughed. He thought to himself, "I wonder how he is going to build a house to set down on that cowhide." "It ain't big enough." So he just said, "Well, all right." The Indian made a big joke out of it--laughed. So he said--

(End of side A)