

--you might not--maybe you'll listen to me. As you grow older-- as you grow older in years, maybe, what I tell you--what an old man--Indian--tell me. He was talking to me. He was talking to me. Lots of things that he told me in life. Lots of things and I'm going to make use of it. I'm going to make use of it as I grow older. Now he was talking to me. He didn't scold me. He didn't. He was talking to me. I want listen to him. If you listen to me--what I'm telling you--you going to always think that way. And so is this boy--that's your friend. It's good to have good friends. I've got a grandson just about your age. He is a little older--one year older. I tell him. He's got lots of friends about his age. Wherever we go--wherever we go-- when we approach people into homes, always be kind to them and talk good words to them. That's what I tell my grandson. He's just one year older than you. Look around. Even if you don't know him, get acquainted with that boy. Get acquainted. It's good to have friends, a boy. A boy growing up in a young man-- in the prime of their lives. In the prime of their lives. Why they should make use of themselves. Our government--our home here in the state of Oklahoma and in the United States, they take them boys. Today they're fighting for you. They're fighting for your mother. They fighting for all of us. They fighting for me--to live like we want to. All over there's homes and there's a boy just about your age--lots of them. Those young men that's over there defending the way we want to live. We call it "Freedom." You got nothing to be scared about. You got nothing to be scared about. Them people that's over there--there's planes, and bombs probably drop on them. Here in this country we haven't got that. Them boys over there. Maybe when you go to school, maybe they teach you about this flag, waving, this flag. This freedom that we've got. This freedom for me to talk to you. Your mother told me--I can tell you stories, but this is the best I can tell you. I talk to my grandson like that. I talk to him. We don't know when that war's going to stop. We don't know when it's going to stop. It might spread out again. We don't know. I hope it stops. I hope you fellows don't have to go through that. I cannot tell--maybe you fellows might have to go through that. For the
