

Wilson River. They tell me he is a cowman." Said, "Well, that's my husband. He lives here, but he's not at home." He's down on the river buying cattle now." Said, "He buys cattle all the time and drives them to Muskogee and sells them." He said, "Well, me and my brother out there, we come from Coffeyville, Kansas. We live there." Said, "We're cowmen and we was told this country is full of cattle, lots of cattle; and we could buy them." Said, "We come to the First National Bank up there. These people is Indian here. We can't talk Cherokee or don't understand. We can't buy nothing as long as we don't understand." (laughter) Said, "They told us Wilson Rider--said that man's a cow buyer. He buys and sells all the time, but he talks Cherokee and English both. He's the best buyer in the whole city." Said, "Well, he's about the only one that buys any cattle and drives them out of here." Said, "They told us to come out here and get him. He'd buy all the cattle we wanted." And she said, "Well, there's a man come buy here, an Indian, this morning. He lives down on the river and he was going to Tulsa and get my husband and told somebody that he'd be home tonight."

(Yeah.)

"He bought about all the cattle he wants, and he's coming home tonight. Well," she said, "if you want to see him, you boys can camp out there." "I hope we got some way to camp there." "You can camp out there. He'll be in tonight, and you can see him." "Well," he told her, "all right." Said he'd sure be glad to do that. They just said, "We'd sure want to see him 'cause we want to buy some cattle. We want to buy four hundred head of cattle and the bank there. They told us to come to him. He'd buy all the cattle we wanted. Well, said there's lots of them here. Said he can buy them. He buys the time himself." Well, that night, my daddy did come in. So the
