

reservation way up in the northern part New Mexico then over in Nevada.

(Yeah.)

They're up there in them mountains. All that valley farming land and everything like that belong to the white man. They made a state out of it and the white man owns it, you see? They took it away from them Indians. It's the same thing right over there in Arizona on the south end of it. That's where the Apache Indians lives. That's the worst fight the Indians had to fight of any of them. And on the upper end, north end of it, that's in Nevada, there's the Pima Indians. Two set--bunches of them in there. That country belonged to them before they took it away from them. Well, they made a state out of that, and the white men homesteaded that land.

(Right:)

And took all of that. They got them on reservations. When I was in there, them Indians wasn't allowed to come into that town. They had to stay right there on that reservation. They had store there and everything. They won't let them go nowhere. If one of them slip out and--them young ones slip out and come into Hilo. I stayed there long time. (word not clear) them laws grab them right there. Then, send him right back to that reservation. They wasn't allowed to fool around in them towns at all. Well, same way up there in them other countries they made states out of every damn one of them.

(That's right.)

Then, took it all. They took all of it. Ain't got nothing now. Ain't got a pot (word irrelevant).

(That's right. No, sir, he's in bad shape now.)

Ain't even recognized that they're human. They own this country. They was created here in the first beginning. Just like everybody else was created in all them other countries (words not clear). People was created there by
