

to set in." He said; "Well, about three o'clock, the owner of that store, see, it is about four o'clock is when they usually come through there." Well, they did. They went over there, and they talked to the man run the store. Well, he was one of them that went over there and got Ed. And Ed (words not clear) too. So, he went in there. There wasn't nobody in there, but the merchant's daughter. About the time they come down there shooting, by god, everybody stayed off of that street. They holed--they knew what was going to happen, you see? And everybody had done cleaned off the street. They knew it was that. About four o'clock, damn, they come right down the street. Now, I know Ed would get there. He come down on the run. (Yeah.)

Said he walked out on that porch there. They was coming down the street there, and one of them was shooting the other way, and one of them was shooting towards him. They seen him, and them damn fellas started shooting at him. - Ed shot them right through there, plumb through. He fell off his horse. The other one, he hit him clean through, right through the side there. He killed both of them right there. By god, they fell off their horses into the street.

(Right there in Wagoner.)

Yeah, right there in Wagoner, killed both of them. By god, he shot them. He didn't tell them a damn thing. He just started shooting.

(That was old Steve and Zeb Crittenden, I mean---)

Yeah, (not clear) blow the horses right off of their feet and stopped.

Said, "You fellas know their wives?" Said, "Yeah, we know them." He said, "You get on them horses right there and tell the wives that I killed them. Tell them to come in here and get them." Well, they went and told them, and they got some of the neighbors there, and they--men went--they
