

They had a Cheyenne mother. Her name was Flying Woman in Cheyenne.

(Did this family, Arrow and his wife and their children--did they live among the Arapahoes or the Cheyennes?)

Yeah, they lived among the Arapahoes. This Minnie, she was married to a Pawnee man.

(Do you know his name?)

Henry--I forgot his last name. They had one child, a little boy. He died after it was born, and then she died. She didn't live very long. She was younger than Jane.

(Did Jane have any children?)

Yeah. She had--I know two. Mary Holland, that's the girl. And she had a boy but I don't know his English name--I just know his Indian name. His Indian name is Little Calf--Little Calf Walk. wa.pcaebis

(Who was their father?)

His name was Holland.

(Is he Arapaho?)

Arapaho.

(What about Andrew and Martin, did they have any children?)

No. They died youngn (Pause, then Myrtle speaks to one of her grandchildren in Arapaho.)

(Do they understand you?)

Oh yeah, they understand me. I try to make them talk it, you know, but they get mixed up. This this one, he talks pretty good in Arapaho. But they understand. They understand what I say. And if they don't understand and say, "What did you say?" I tell them, and that way they understand. I want them to know they're half Arapahoes.

(This Andrew and Martin, you said when you were young they used to chase you?)

Yeah, you know they was boys and they used to not want me to go out and play way out, you know. They have to run me back. That's the way the Indians do.