

It was on the twenty-seventh. And that's when the first Holiness Church came to Hulbert.

(To marry you all?)

No, huh-uh. They just came that day and was a fixing and at night. And we were married in the afternoon. We had a wedding at the home, you know. Had a home wedding. So then we went to the first Holiness meeting that I ever heard of before.

(Uh-huh. That night.)

That night. And then we moved to Porter.

(Right after that?)

Yeah. Next day, we had our things all fixed and we moved to Porter.

FAMILY VISITS - HUSBAND WAS FARMER

And of all the trips we made back and forth; about ever two weeks we'd have to come home to see the folks.

(His folks lived down here, too.)

They both lived just with a street between them, was all. They lived back where Miss Brockman lives, you know where that's at? Well, they lived there and we lived over here, right down here in this house.

(What did your husband do?)

He was a farmer.

(A farmer?)

Uh-huh. And that's what he was doing at Porter at the time. We knowed one another all our lives; so when we was kids at Porter why we knew one another. And we lived, oh, sometimes a mile and sometimes three or four miles from--

(So this was your childhood sweetheart, wasn't it?)

Yes, yes it was. It sure was.

(Was he the only boy you ever went with?)
