

(At the Indian Boarding School?)

Uh-huh. And they'd stay over there till Christmas. Then when Christmas come, why they'd get to come home. Then they'd have to go stay there. I like the way they did and the way all of them.

(But your mother allowed you to run around with them, huh?)

No, we just didn't run around like they do. But we had--there'd be certain pretty well respected people, women, families and all; but they would give parties for their girls.

(Yeah. Uh-huh.)

Then there'd be certain bunch of them.

(That they'd invite.)

But they wasn't there hardly any, you know, they were gone most of the time, at school.

DRINKING PROBLEM OF INDIANS - HULBERT ROUGH TOWN

(Well, did the Indian people drink a lot at that time when they come into town?)

Oh, yeah.

(Did you see any fights or gun battles or anything?)

Oh yes, that was a sight!

(You mean they'd shoot each other?)

Uh--well, I don't know but they'd just really have--I can't think of any--

(I just wonder if Hulbert used to be real rough.)

Well, I tell you something else about Hulbert. We called it rough at that time. But we was still there on the street; and we hadn't been here too long. And uh--I don't know whether you heard of Ed Hulbert or not. The name was Ed Severenson.

(No.)

At that time they lived back out here north of town, back oh, I'd say it's
