

(Oh, you did.)

We lived here on this side of the street and 'cross the road, there where I said the Church of Christ was, there and right on, it wasn't there then. And then right on over there was where they lived. And we played there. And then there's a great big old two storey hotel, great long one on both sides of the road, that long.

(Well, who all would stay there?)

Huh?

HOTELS

(Who would stay in those hotels?)

Uh--passerbys and, you know, people would come and then some people would rent so many of the rooms.

(Just to live in. Uh-huh. Well, was Tahlequah much bigger than Hulbert then?)

No.

(Not too much bigger.)

I don't think it was. It was scattered out a little. But these big hotels, they had been built way back--they were old when we come here. But they tore them down. But they were just real nice old fashion hotels, you know. And they were--you know what they looked like. They had a great long room and then a big hall in the middle of them. Big high, two storey. Well, there was one on that side of the road, and there was one over there. Back there, just out that way, right Miss Kitts lives from Church of Christ, right there.

(Yeah.)

Well, there was great big long one in there. Uh-huh. Great big long hotel.

HAS MADE "MOONSHINE" LIQUOR AT HOME

(Well now, did they have saloons back then? It was prohibition, wasn't it?)
