

why?" And I said, "Put my feet in when I'm want to sit and rest in the rocking chair." That's what I got it for in there. And I sit down there why you can just put your feet there. I'd rather have--I have a stool in there, but I'd rather have that little chair as that stool to put my feet on.

(Uh-huh. Yeah, that's good.)

But these little youngsters I was telling you about. This little girl she was the cutest little old trick ever was. And they dressed her nice, her mother did. And she had her hair all curled up, you know, in them little rings and had a little bow ribbon up here., And this little colored boy he never come to Sunday School with anything on but a suit. He was always dressed up in this necktie up here.

(Oh-h.)

Yeah, they dressed him up that. And he always had to have that necktie and his little suit. And then when he'd come in, he say, "My coat's getting awful hot." He said, "Could I take it off?" And I'd take his coat off and lay it up there somewhere, you know. But he was always dressed up, you know. But one day I noticed them talking back this way at the door. And, you know, I just letting them alone because they'd got tired of the class. Just so they was quiet. And they'd got tired of the class, and so I seen them. Well, this little girl shw gets her chair and gets over there, and there's a screen door at the south door there at the room where I'm at most of the time. And she set down there and looking outside there, you know, just unconcerned in that little old chair. Well, that little colored boy and I was finishing up on the class but I was watching them all. I watch the whole business, and I think you should. So this little colored boy he got tired and he got up and he just as quiet. Now I tell them, "Now don't make no racket. You can't
