

I finished up my last trip in 1912.

(What do you mean last trip?)

I'd come and go back--the way it was--I'd come up and go back.

(Oh I see.)

My last trip--

(Travel by wagon?)

Oh yeah, by wagon, wagon train.

(How long did it take you?)

About two nights and part of four days. Three nights and part of four days to get here. Took a little, we couldn't make it.

CONCERNING ROPE AND RATTLESNAKES

So I, in the early day is quite a story. I might put this in if you want me to. I believe that if I had any record that I'm, I don't know whether I want to put it that way or not but I was , would have been if there'd been a record of it, the champion wild horse rider in when I was in my teens. I worked with Bill Halsell and I, he had some that was pretty rough. Now, they were pretty rough. Seven year old, you know and no lasso had ever been put on them at all. And like told somebody said, "Why did you so and so?" And I said, "Well, done this, and I said, "Well, I rode to please the boss and fifteen dollars a month." (Laughter)

(One reason to ride, isn't it?)

We had another story, I don't know if it's absolute no question, no question would dispute it. But Boyce, it's probably worked more time, a dozen times than before I ever missed one. A lariat rope with turn a rattlesnake.

(It'll turn a rattlesnake.)

It'll turn them. I've turned them. I know it.

(How do you do it?)
