

hitaeseiw^ω -- that means a man talking about another one's sisters and brothers, older or younger. Same thing applies if a woman's referring to her brothers or her cousins.

(Her own brothers and cousins?)

Her own brothers or cousins. We don't have no word for cousins.

(If a woman is talking and she's referring to her own brothers and her boy cousins, what would she say?)

naetaeseiw^ω -- "nae--" means "my".

(And if she's talking about somebody else's brothers or cousins, what would she say?)

She'd say hitaeseiw^ω There's a general term as to both sexes of this same meaning which means "my co-nursants", or "I nursed on the same mother." That's the term ^{neiθis}_ω .n^ω I believe that also refers to a man speaking or a woman, speaking about their cousins--

(Would you say that one again?)

^{neiθis}_ω .n^ω -- ^{neiθi} -- s^ω .n^ω(^ω) (He is emphasizing last sound or glottal reflex.)

(And what would the term refer to?)

That's my "co-nursants" and the meaning of that is "I'm the children that nurse the same mother." There's another term for that. I'm going to refer to that later on.

(O.K. What is that?)

^{neiθ}_ω wu.

(Would you say that again?)

^{neiθ}_ω wu. I can also address a person--man or woman--with that same term. My "co-nursants". They always nurse the same breast--

^{neiθ}_ω wu.
