

naeθae⁵'aeθae -- That includes adopted sister or step-sister or their cousin's sister--woman cousin.

(Bittle: That would be a sister's son?)

Yeah, a sister's son. naeθae⁵'aeθae And when I'm addressing him I say naeθae⁵'ae when I'm addressing him. And when I'm referring to him, naeθae⁵'aeθ -- naeθae⁵'aeθae When there's plural nephews they say naeθae⁵'aeθw h w' -- weak vowel at the end, sound.

(Bittle: Would you say that one again?)

naeθae⁵'aeθw h w' A woman applies that to her boy nephews or a man's sister's children.

(But now a man's brother's children, how would you call your brother's son?)

"My son." neihae -- nei -- That's when I'm addressing him, nei -- just like my own son.

(Bittle: Would you say it again?)

nei -- "my son," "sonnie" or "son." And if there's more than one son, I'd say neih h. Same way with your own children -- neih.w h.w?

(Should I ask about a woman's--?)

(Bittle: Sister's daughters and brother's daughters.)

(O.K. What about your own sister's daughters--how would you address them?)

nae.sae⁵p' -- nae.sae⁵b w -- when I'm addressing her.

(What?)

nae.sae⁵b w

(That's when you're addressing her?)
