

'Cause her family was scattered. And they were just driven from their home.

(Yes, ma'am.)

And they were scattered. And she went down there to live with him.

And they lived part of the time with Stan Watie family.

(Well. If she were living now she could tell a lot of things, couldn't she.)

Oh, yes.

(Whole lot of things.)

She could remember things that happened a way back yonder, while she couldn't remember the modern day things.

(Yes.)

Before her death.

FATHER COULD READ - COULD NOT WRITE.

(Interruption) Sentence not clear.

Now he could read. He'd sit down and read the newspaper and he read the Oklahoma history.

(Well.)

And tell you everything he read.

(Your dad couldn't write, but he could read.)

Yeah.

(Well.)

But I never did know him to write his name.

(Well, my goodness.)

But he could read.

(Well, that's remarkable.)

And I know he could read because he could sit down and tell you everything that he had read.

(Yeah.)

And oh, he had an Oklahoma History book and when we use to come home
