

PEOPLE WERE GOOD NEIGHBORS IN EARLY DAYS

They, all good neighbors.

(They sure did now. They had a lot of it. All of 'em hard workers too. Back in those old days people were concerned with one another, weren't they?)

(That's right.

(Yeah they gave to each other.)

That's right. That's right.

(Anybody got sick they go see about them.)

Yes sir, but now days you just suffer it out.

(No, people don't seem to have the time to be concerned about his neighbor like they used to.)

Its important.

SALT SPRINGS WERE USEFUL FOR COMMUNITIES

(Yeah. You say there used to be a salt springs down there?)

Yeah.

(Springs down there.)

Uh-huh, yeah, used to shoot high up in the air...

(Water shooting up in the air, huh?)

Yeah, water shooting up in the air. It stunk too. I mean it stuck until it made a tall hard cone shape just like that.

(Yeah)

It was about 10 feet high.

(Well).

(And the salt it just formed the stump around there, core?)

That's right. (words not clear)

(Yeah)

Get out there (words not clear) water.

(Well. Well, I guess, the folks long time ago used to go there to get their salt then.)

Oh yeah.

(Uh-huh)
