

to shake the earth. And don't get scared, I'm just a storm that's going to come. And hit your place.

(Is this some kind of -- a spirit of storm is telling them that?)

Yeah. Yeah.

(Singing the song?)

Uh-huh. Singing the song. Maybe Sainday. I don't know.

(Background conversation -- Laughter.)

The one that knows. She knows about that red tape too. She knows about (words not clear). You go up there and she'd not doing anything this afternoon. I just can't think of any. Everybody talks English and I forget everything.

(Know of any medicine man tales about your grandpa?)

'Yeah that time he killed that snake. Can you remember he went to the carnival, you know. They had that carnival you know and they was scaring them, he was scaring them white people shaking that snake at them, that big old snake. And that carnival man was carrying that snake he pointed it at the white people like that. And he pointed it at grandpa and grandpa just spit on it and that snake just fell over dead.

(What's this?)

And they was going to sue him because he killed the snake? He said, "No. No." They was going to take him to jail. He said, "No, wait." I'll make it come back to life for you." He grabbed a hold of that snake and done something to it. And it start wiggling.

(What was his name?)

Our grandpa, George Podlaw.

(Do you know that one?)

No this is the first time I ever. You come sit, sit over here and tell it.