

(It would be really interesting. (static) Chalk from, uh-huh.)

Woman: He said it looked white in the picture.

Well, whenever you cut into it it's white. My dad brought back some. They used to make pencils out of it.

(Well, that sure is an idea.)

And there'd be pieces that long, and oh, longer. But it was some place in Georgia. Now I don't know exactly where. Not too far from North Carolina.

(words not clear) further down.

Woman: Oowaligah, Georgia is where he always talked about (Photographs)

(Oowaligah(?))

That's gold.

Third man's voice: That's the best picture I've ever seen of Bill Audry.

AN OLD SCHOOL

(Is this an old Coal school up here? Is that a fairly recent school or is it one of the older ones?)

It's one, I think, established after statehood.. Now, I'm not sure, but I think.

Woman: I'm sure it is. Now the people, Dan Coal, Ausley, and Mrs. Maude Mitchell (words not clear)

Well.

MALE SEMINARY - PLAYING BALL

And they--The Male Seminary when they'd play 'em. George Pool and all just a whole lot of those old timers, they'd play. Bill Rogers played. And they played right out in front of the Sacred Heart school, just across the street there. They had a little ballpark. And shoot the little altar boys couldn't hold a light to the seminary boys. I don't reckon they ever made a score. Boy, oh, they did have lots of fun. Girls was over in the
