

Third voice: I heard he was almost dead when he was up there hospital at Stilwell.

That's where he died at that rest home.

(Silas Young.)

He lost his mind. He got where --

(Static)

Silas come first. I'd go see him, you know. I'd go in him room. He knew who I was and talking. Go to where I'd go in there you know to see him. He wouldn't know me.

(Well.)

Talk to him a while, he'd recognize me. Then it got to where then he wouldn't recognize me. Went to see him one time. It was hot. There was another guy in the room there. It was hot on the outside. It wasn't very comfortable inside there. Silas was laying in his bed. He didn't even know he had on a leather jacket. I went to see him three or four times after that. They had him in a room by himself. Had his bed pushed up in a corner, up against the wall, you know, and a rail, so he wouldn't fall off. He didn't know. He didn't live very long after that.

(Well.)

Yeah, he lived -- .

MORE ABOUT CEMETERIES

(Yeah. Amos, on that road that goes over to Wauhillau, right there where you hit the cross road when you go around this way. You know there's barn on each side of the road there before you get to the crossroad. Then right below that, I think, was the old Ben Whittington place. Right back on this side of that barn on the right hand side, just right there in those few trees around there. Then there's kind of an open place
