

The doctor would just give him shots. That's all he'd do for him. (Static)
My father used tobacco.

(Well. Just use tobacco.)

And I'll tell you what that white man done. I think he paid him. I think he give him half bushel of onions for doctoring that.

(Well.)

Now doctor give you shots, he wouldn't take onions would he?

(No, he wouldn't. He want that folding money.)

An Indian remedy that would beat giving anybody shots for the snakebite,
Yeah, my dad's a doctor.

(Well.)

That's worth knowing.

(Worth knowing.)

Third man's voice: It sure it.

MORE DOCTORING - RAISED TOBACCO IN EARLY DAYS

(Well, did people use to raise tobacco?)

Yeah.

(Well.)

Boy its stout too.

Third man's voice: Yeah.

Homemade tobacco.

(I've never seen it raised in this country.)

Third man's voice: You haven't.

Oh yeah. Boy that's --

Third man's voice: Yeah, they raise tobacco.

And it's really stout.

Third man's voice: You ever hear of a child having a thrash?
