

good to be here, the sun is shining bright, and the wind has given us a little comfort here against the heat, so this remaining few minutes lets witness some of the original dances of the Tia Piah Society. This is a military organization originally. Basically, only warriors are eligible for membership and this is a tradition that survived all these years past. And it is good that traditional dances (not clear) for this day. We welcome all of you. I hope you will witness this historical event today. If you have your cameras, I think you will take back with you some of the things that you witness today. Which is not a common thing, it only come once in a great while. We are fortunate to witness this great event. All right, for the remainder of the program, I'll turn it back to our program announcer, uh--

Announcer: Thank you. I think our head singer has been instructed on the features of our--(Music and fireworks in background, drums and singing for about 8 minutes of tape.) --songs, round dance songs, that are dedicated to our service men. Most of our songs that were sung at the time, were more or less recently composed from the voice of (name not clear), however, two are songs were World War II. The last one to the Thunderbirds of the 45th Division. (much conversation in background.) Songs and events that are coming up are a tribute to our most distinguished guest today, (not clear) War Dance songs. Veteran songs also composed for (names not clear)--brought to you by various members of the service club, is with us. (Much background noise and music for about 2 minutes.)

Kaubin: These songs have been requested by the Tia Piah Society--(More music for about 5 minutes.) These songs were composed for war veterans who have been overseas. (Music for about 5 minutes.) Thank you one and all. Ladies and gentlemen (not clear)--I would like for leaders to come forward to present General Brown, a special gift. On behalf of Tia Piah Society I want to make a presentation of this blanket to our good friend, General Brown. God bless you, General Brown. (Applause)
