

dealings than Ross has. In fact they offered chief's position and he never would accept it.

(That's the one then. Yeah.)

Yep.

(You know its--it would have been wonderful if some of those fellas like Major Lowrey and some of the others had made a diary of their travels and experiences. Well, they got a lot of his. They got a lot of his.

(They do.)

Smithsonian Institute. Yeah. Smithsonian Institute got a lot of that.

(I think that's good that they preserved that.)

See, when they wrote the genealogy on that. Now Ted Hall that used to be agent for the Osages. He's part Choctaw. But, you see, Ted Hall's grandmother was Lidia Lowrey.

(Yeah.)

He's a Lowrey through her. And Ted Hall and Mayes Lowrey and Doctor Ballenger that was professor there at Northeastern. Now he's from a Lowrey, see. Oh I don't know, its been quite awhile. 'Course I brought a lot of this other stuff up to date for them. Helped'em with it. They wrote that and its quite something. Genealogy on that its--

(It must be. So much of it, too.)

Oh yeah.

(Even starting back with Major George Lowrey coming forward.)

Well it was beyond him -

(Going beyond him then they would really have a large--)

They went where the old original come from Scotland. Back in 1700 something.
