

and have 'em brought back. Because that guy hadn't bought 'em. No more checks buying cattle from him. No more checks. Just the money.

(I worked out around Gallup, New Mexico.)

And they got paid for their wool or sheep or something. They'd have a big old canvas sack and it full of silver. I've covered that Navajo reservation.

(tape skip)

(Acquainted with Comanche, and he lived out in those hills when come there when he was quite young. And he had spent all of his life there.)

You know there's one thing I've often wondered out there. It seems to me them cattle especially, and older bulls and their hoofs would be this long.

(Yeah)

(End of Interview)