

of them had sneezed, it would have been too bad.

JOKE PLAYED ON TEACHERS:

(What about this--you said something a minute ago about locking in or tying in the teachers?)

Yeah. The walls were deep, thick double walls you know, and the doors opened inward and that left a wide space between the door and the outside of the room-- professor's room. You take a couple bed slats and put across the door on outside and take a trunk rope you know, put round the door knob and double Half hitch round this latch outside and he was secured. (much laughter) then we'd draw. They would draw; not me. I couldn't do a thing like that.

(This orchestra play outside the school any?)

Well, yeah. Some of us played in what they'd call the Big Orchestra. [We played for when the girls would come over. Seminary Girls would come over and have a program or anything, we'd sometimes have a number on it.

VISITING GIRL SEMINAR:

(My. Tyner was telling this afternoon that you used to go over to the girls seminary and visit back and forth and all you ever did was sit around and just talk. Is that what you did?)

Uh-huh. One thing we used to have this 7th day of May now that was an anniversary, then you know, all we had plenty of transportation. That's one good thing about it. We'd walk from the male seminary over to the female seminary and pick up the girls there and walk them over to the Illinois river and spend the day and walk 'em back and then walk back to male seminary. We had plenty of transportation. (laughter)

(Plenty time to visit?)

Plenty time to visit? (Laughter)

FUNNY INCIDENT WHICH OCCURRED:

(Mr. Butler, you have any comments you want to make about what we have been talking about?)

One little incident that was very funny was a friend that I was speaking of, he passed away years ago. One funniest even t that I can remember about the old sem-
