

This is Leonard Makér--Mr. and Mrs. Barnes you say? He is a historian, Oklahma State University, not Oklahoma University. He writes Indian stories. Used to be a burial ground here. I was raised around here (not clear). My folks lived in Cyril, three of them. I don't know if you remember them or not. You lived here very long?

Mrs. Barnes: I've lived here all of my life. My daddy was raised on this place.

Joe Ware, you mean!

Mrs. Barnes: Uh-huh.

Pat--Pat is your daddy?

Mrs. Barnes: Uh-huh.

Charles was your--?

Mrs. Barnes: Uncle.

Uncle Joe--Old Joe was your grandpa. I went to school with him, practically, we lived--

Mrs. Barnes: You mean (name not clear). What is your name?

Cribbs. C-r-i-b-b-s.

Mrs. Barnes: Which one of them are you?

I'm Art. I'm just younger than (name not clear). The last one in the family.

Mrs. Barnes: I know all of these over here in town, but I didn't know you.

Well, I've been in Oklahoma City, oh, 35--for the last 45 years. I left here in '25, way before you were born. 'Course we live in Anadarko now. Manage the (name of Motel not clear) Motel.

Mrs. Barnes: Yeah, I didn't know this.

Been up there a couple of years.

Mrs. Barnes: I didn't know this was a burial ground here. My dad told me not to--oh, a couple of years I guess, he told me about it.

Oh! We used to pick up beads and arrowheads here, right--

Mrs. Barnes: Well. The others--what's the older boy's name?
