

BACKGROUND OF SAKEY BREAD AND MAGGIE DOWNING

Maggie: I know Sakey, she was trying to go to school. I was married, acted like--I was married. She passed by my house, she was come from Double Springs--

(Sakey, Sakey, her name's Sakey Bread, now, isn't it?)

Uh-huh.

(Before she got married, what was her name?)

Henson,

(Sakey Henson?)

Uh-huh.

(And where was it, where were you born Sakey?)

Sakey: (Speaks in Cherokee.)

Maggie: That's uh--you know where, Ducey used to camp? That old house?

That's where her was born. (Irrelevant conversation with child.)

(Oh, actually you'd have to consider that Hulbert, wouldn't you?)

Maggie: Uh-huh, uh-huh. And then when they moved, moved away, they want to Double Springs, you know, way that's where I (words not clear) I was tellin' you.

(That old house?)

Maggie: Yeah, right on the edge of that field, she raised her up down there.

(Sakey: Words in Cherokee) Converse in Cherokee

(Maggie: Words in Cherokee)

(--brothers, sisters--)

Maggie: Ten. Six boys and uh, two two girls--no four girls, the rest of them might have been boys, I don't know. (Speaks in Cherokee)

Maggie: She's the only one living.
