

You know they draw all from their husbands for social security. He said if they're able to work, if they're able to get around, they're going to make them work. I was thinking, she ought to go see the Doctor. Sakey.

(Uh-huh.)

(Maggie and Sakey speak in Cherokee.) They're gonna cut them off-- spoken in Cherokee.

(Mama, they can't make her work cause, she, first of all; she can't speak English.)

Yeah, that's a lot of help too, you know.

(Right!)

Sakey and Maggie speaking in Cherokee)

('Bout all she could do is baby sit or pick berries or something like that and that's seasonal. So that wouldn't be enough to bother.)

Well me and Sakey just so dumb it's gonna be both of them.

(Oh, you are not!--You aren't dumb!)

We could (unclear) chicken feed. (Laughter) You could pick it up a little bit, though, or somethin'.

(You'll are not dumb.) (Laughter)

(You could teach a lot of these other people around here a lot of things.)

Yeah, we know medicine, a few things. We know how to help somebody, how to doctor them. Uh-huh.

(They would listen to you.)

I was just hinkin' a whole lot last night and betcha a didn't go to sleep.

I was thinkin' "poor kids," you know, like Luke and Luke lost the welfare check, too. Already.

(Well, did he go back to work?)
