

(He was alert though right to the end. Because I remember him coming down and I helped fix some papers for him.)

Yeah, he'd been hit by lightning too, way back.

(Long time ago, he was?)

When he was young. Lightning hit him. They thought he was--he was dead.

They rung the bell in the church--New Hope Church. And he come back to, you know. They doctored him. (Cherokee spoken to child and to Sakey and some irrelevant conversation about frog.)

Hooley's not too well now.

(No, he isn't.)

Maggie speaks in Cherokee.

(He had that pneumonia.)

Double pneumonia. He had that way back. That poison. (Speaks in Cherokee with Sakey)

(Mom when they's growin' up, did they raise any gardens?)

Maggie speaks in Cherokee.

Yeah, they always raise somethin'.

(Did they grind the corn for their bread?)

BAKING BREAD-COFFEE SUBSTITUTE

(Maggie speaks in Cherokee with Sakey.) Yeah, they baked brick bread.

They make corn and stuff like that with the brick. And they had a pound so they could pound on that stuff. We don't have anymore like that. Nobody don't make those pounders. Sure would like to get one just to a (unclear). I aimed to ask Hooley to make me one, long as he was living. I mean as long as he was able to do it. I just can't anymore.

(How 'bout, did they drink a lot of coffee back then, too?)

Maggie speaks in Cherokee.