

(Cherokee language). Yes, I been to Sand Springs. Well, you just as well call it Tulsa. (laughter).

Maggie: Yeah, that's where the kids live.

That's where my daughter lives, you know, Hattie. (sentence not clear)

MISCELLANEOUS COMMENTS

Did you hear them two boys drowning?

(Yes, I heard about that.)

I was over there close.

(Oh you were? That's only a week ago, wasn't it?)

Yeah.

(Oh, uh-huh.)

See, Thursday. I don't know when they buried. I never did find out. Oh, you ought to see the people they said. I guess everybody went over there.

They has to use the laws you know, people's so many. It has to be that way.

Yeah (not clear), has to stay in there to watch a gate when you turned out to arrest the people--you know, the young people, you know, they be acting smart like that.. They chase around. Let's see, the other (not clear). Nobody can get in any water if they had any mind. They been told all the time, "Stay out," sign, "Stay out."

(They drowned too didn't they, two of them did.)

Hum-huh, next day, me and Hattie went out there. They had to fix that--that's bridge you know, it's just like up here. They had something in there, kinda rough. Tube or something cross in there. And I just can't guess. I get scared. Didn't want to go, didn't want to see, maybe falling in the water if I went. (laughs)

GRANDMOTHERS CAME OVER TRAIL OF TEARS FROM GEORGIA

Maggie: See, this is second time, you know, her was drawing money, you know, to get land. And he got land and stuff like that, you know. Now, this time you know, the (not clear) like hers, you know, they got some money again.

(Oh!)
