

like that. In other words, they can help you, you know, if something like that, you know, you won't be lonely. If you got to go over to a friend, you know, they won't let you. You'll want to quit, and he won't going to quit you. They can fix you.

(They can fix it so he'll forget about you?)

Mmm-hmm.

(So you can get rid of him?) (Laughter)

Maggie: Not to kill him, you know. Something like, "I never will."

Daddy used to tell me, said, "You're crazy enough. If I teach you something, you would kill somebody." I said, "No, I wouldn't." (Laughter)

"I wouldn't dare."

(But then, you never practice any of that stuff. Is that what you mean, Aunt Suzie? But herb medicine, you believed in.)

Maggie: Oh, I know a lot of things. Mama (inaudible) medicine (inaudible). I just--I told you halfway. Still, I know a lot of medicine on (inaudible). (Yeah, sometimes I want to write down--maybe write up a little book about it.)

Maggie: In fact, we're not supposed to drink--I don't know what the name (speaks in Cherokee). I don't know what you call that.

(I'd like to find out some kind--what it is they drink, too, when they're getting ready to have a baby.)

Maggie: That's what it is one thing, I was talking about. I don't know what's the name. Maybe Aunt Suzie know. I just couldn't. They're just white, you know. They grow--I'll show you, Faye, when you are out at my house.

(Okay.)

Maggie: There's two kind. One of them (inaudible--then speaks in Cherokee for about a minute.) I'm afraid to try. I believe that's what it is.
