

got shot off of his horse, and it happen he got shot in the knee. But he was able to conceal himself, and when the fight was over, the two whites and the Comanches separated and withdraw, and ah, the younger brother of the man that got wounded was able to help his brother, but was unable to move him because they didn't have a horse. So he had to drag him the best he could and they were began to have hardships there. They began to run out of food and water. This wounded man's younger brother one day seen a group of Indian, or seen a group of people at a distance, maybe several miles out of their way. And seem somehow they chased after them. And they must have been moving faster than he thought but it took him quite a while longer than he thought, to find those people. When he finally caught with them, and took them back to rescue his brother, all they could find was the spot where the two brother had been hiding and staying and no trace of the wounded brother. And they searched and made what they thought was a complete search of the wild area around the spot and they couldn't find nothing. The man just disappeared. So, eventually, they came on home and later on a bigger bunch went to look for him and they couldn't find him. They couldn't find no trace. So, they just thought he - the abandoned him eventually. And after about a week - after a year's wait, they were getting ready to mourn him as being dead and somebody thought about this medicine man that could read the future. So somebody went to Birdshead and told him and went through the ceremony and presented him a gift and that takes a medicine man to find out something of the future or find out like in this case, somebody that was lost. He told them what to do. How to build a lodge, and of course, people went to witness something like this. They had a crowd in no time after they built the lodge. And then the singers began to sing for the priest, the Sun priest, Birdshead. It took them some time to work, to get him worked up. And people, took part, they helped sing and then on certain occasions other people would dance and only at this time only Birdshead would dance. And they were singing one certain
