

error in her grade point. Well then, they realized that there's not reason why she shouldn't have it. And I think that this is more of a reason that she should have because of her being a senior. And a degree candidate, I should say.

(Now, is she going to be a teacher?)

She is going to be a teacher. And she plans to work with the Indian youth in a, possibly, a boarding school if possible. Anyway, she would like to work in an Indian community with an Indian family or with Indian education or anything. She wants to do. She didn't want to do that till I got her in this idea of Indian education. More or less not only for herself--not only for ourselves but for our Indian youth as well. Because I guess that everybody knows that the teacher does not have the high salary that because of our wanting to educate our young people. This is the reason that I feel that we are going into the educational field.

(Well, do you feel like she'll get this grant now or not? Are you still having trouble with it?)

No, we're not having trouble with it 'cause we're letting everything cool off for the time. But then I feel that she will get a grant because of an error not made on her part but on the Bureau's part. And after they realized this error, the apologies were made. But ah--

(They still didn't promise you anything?)

They were more promising when she was in school. And at the moment she is going to summer school to bring up this number of semester hours. Well, after this summer school semester, she'll have ninety-one hours of over a two-point, possibly a two-point grade point average. And that's more-- that's sufficient to be qualified as a senior. And actually, there's no reason why she shouldn't be given a grant. Because of her grade point. And her number of hours.
