

(Well, if she doesn't get it, you're going to go to the higher ups, aren't you?)

Well, I hope so. I don't know whether I'll go to the higher ups. But I'll try to do the best I can to get her grant through. Because one of us will have to work sooner or later because my wife hasn't had any experience in any field. Has never worked before in her life. Has never had the need to work. Well, I will have to work to put one of us through school.

Mainly her.

(Do you think perhaps that you'll work this fall and not go to school? And let her finish up?)

I think I'll let her finish up first, before me. I was wanting, if possible, that she and I could both graduate at the same time. But I more really want her to graduate first and then we'll provide her with the education that she really wants. In other words to give her the required security she needs. Not worrying about when she's going to school and where her next meal is coming from. I mean she's not living in a dormitory anymore. She's living at home with me and everything like that. So that's the reason that I want to give her the security so she can go to school and not have to worry about anything like this. This is one main factor that has always hindered us.

(Well, I don't see any reason, personally, why you couldn't get a grant this fall yourself, too.)

Well, like I said, "I can get a grant." But we've tried it both of us going to school.

(On just--just the grant?)

On just the grant.

(And it's just not enough.)

Yes.
