

and get your medicine, it's alright.

(The "he" of this statement is Mr. Mikeoby, current state president of the Native American Church.)

Bring it back to Oklahoma. But only thing, they got it in the Senate, tied up over there, it's a narcotic. But they analyze it again and it ain't nothing. Not a narcotic. So they just right there, and he say he like to go with some members of this Native American Church to donate a dollar a head..each member of this Native American Church. Well, me and Socby, we told them we'd be glad to when we get a dollar, we'd be glad to help you. And I asked him if he seen those Redbone boys and he said, no I haven't but I will he said. I know they be glad to. And here the other day, I went to the Indian Office and I asked that man that works in there, Reed Jones, well I asked him about it and he say there's nothing to it (e.g. that the state will not prohibit the use of peyote among the Indians). He said everything's alright. He's kind of one of the big shots of that Native American Church. So that's the way it going now. I don't know how it's coming out. The way Nick (Mikeoby) told me, they got it tied up over there. They going to pass on to next place, they might ruin our church. I don't know. I said they might. They way they carry it now, some of them go like they do.

(How's that Fred, I don't know what you mean?)

Some of them come in there and..and well they been drinking you know. Some of them come in there like that, got strong breath of alcohol and things like that.

(Is that more common now than it was four or five years ago?)

That coming in drunk? No, not now, not like it used to be. It's kind of slacked up. Ain't as bad as it used to be a couple years. I ain't seen anybody coming in drunk..drinking. This Kiowa guy I was talking about, Scobey, he's a bad one about that. He drinks then goes, got that strong breath of alcohol then goes in there. I told him one time, you shouldn't be coming in like that you are. I said I ain't nobody, I'm not better than anybody but I'm just telling you for your
