

he works till midnight. Sometimes he says, aw, it's too late. I don't feel like going. He did one time, down at his Dad's. He got off to work, came down there about one o'clock.

(Why do the Caddoes have more meetings than the Apaches?)

Well, I don't know. They have different ways from us Apaches. Sometimes they have these memorial meetings. Some of their parents passed on and after four days they have a peyote meeting. Next day they have this big feast. That their ways. Sometime they just..say, that somebody made a vow, you know and they going to have a meeting. They wait on one another. Like this one, they find out that so and so they going to have a meeting. Well we just put off ours till you going to have yours. Then when they get through the next guy that going to have it, he goes and have it. Just like that.

(Does it have to be four days after?)

Yea, the Caddoes. That's what they call their memeorial meeting, but just any-time besides this memorial meeting they have it every week. They had it every week here one time. Every Saturday.

(Is this every week all year long?)

They have it every week. About four Saturdays. I went to every one.

(Does that go on all year?)

No, it don't go all year. Now like tomorrow, or Saturday night, maybe somebody might have one. Caddoes. But I haven't seen anyone, yet. Old Andy Dellah, he always know. Then there's an old Caddoe, he always know. But they all generally know. These Caddoes when they going to have a meeting somebody come up here one of the boys say we're going to have a meeting such and such a day and I might be interested in going. Say yea. So they come here and pick me up sometimes. Take me, bring me back. They pretty nice about that.

(Who conducts most of the Caddo meetings?)

Oh, Francis Williams does mostly. He does most of them. Oh, there's another guy. Harley Wooster, but he's not able. He had a stroke around here, two or three years ago. He can't hardly get by, but he conducts them once in a while. When these boys ask him he goes out.
