

(No, the taught--)

He lives right down here. You can't miss it, just before the road bends.

Before that main road set their home there about three or four miles.

(Yeah.)

Just go right here on east and they live 'bout a mile and a half or two miles. 'Bout a mile and a half you cross a little creek. But you just keep on going around there and there's a road down here to the right.

Go right straight on to the left and you'll come to his place. Nice place. And there's a big cemetery there you know. Butler cemetery

Big cemetery.

(Yeah.)

Now I never did know any other people who knew that, but I did.

(Yeah. This would be an--in addition to Butler.)

Yeah.

(Some little cemetery over by Holton. The Butler cemetery. But each is not very far from that old Butler school site.)

Boy, I'll tell you there's another place where them Scrapers buried.

(Scrapers. That sounds right.)

You go to John A. Butler. Go right on till you come to the first house.

He is living right on up through there. There's a little graveyard.

That just made me think. "You meant off the road.

(That's the one.)

(Interruption.)

He lives all alone now.

(Yeah. Had a log house though.)

Yeah, had a little log house over there. And about two or three graves there.
