

(Yeah.)

Just had his house there completely made of log. Now its all gone.

(Let's see that was George Starr and some of his family.)

Some of his family. George Starr used to live there all through that on that old place way back there.

(Now where would that location be?)

Well, now let's see. You go to Butler school house.

(Yeah.)

And there's nobody could tell you about where it's at. 'Cause I don't think there's anybody in there that knows anything about it. Anyhow, the Porter Fields own it.

(Interruption)

(Yeah.)

But he's not there. He goes to Miami. The place there is rented from the old lady and its right across the field from where this old lay lives. Right on due east. Its all--nothing there now. Folks aren't living there.

(Yeah.)

I know there used to a great big old cedar tree there. 'Course that's probably--

(Yeah.)

People cut it down. Don't leave anything. Wouldn't be any of that left where you can recognize it and know what it is. (interruption) George Starr. A man came up from Ft. Carson to buy it.

(Yeah.)

I know I was raised up there on that place. I used to see a bunch graves. Graves up in there all the time. Tombstones. Now that's been way back there.
