

in there of those Indians?)

I just don't know. There's so many of 'em I just don't hardly remember now who--but there used to be lots of 'em down in there.

(Well, do you remember that Salt Springs that they used to have down in there?)

Salt Springs?

(Yes.)

Yes sir.

(What did it look like? 'Course its underwater now.)

Its underwater now. Salt--now it seem to like I did. Now I didn't know, seem to me like I did, I thought.

(What schools were down in there that you remember?)

All that school that I remember is that school right up there where our church is.

(Yeah. Now, let's see. That was Brushey School.)

That was Brushey school. (

(Now Martha Brown school, where was that?)

Martha Brown School. That was the other school. Our school, Brushey school down about half mile south.

(Yeah.)

Then east.

(East.)

About a mile. Where Martha Brown school is. Up on the hill.

(And then there was another one way on in south of that, wasn't there?)

There was another one south of that someplace.

(What did they call that one? Was it Pheasant Hill? No.)

No, seems like it was. I don't know maybe it was.

(Pheasant Hill, something like that.)
