

more slender people. Well, you can't tell it, by looking at me. They were taller and slender and they had olive colored skin.

(So, they never were real dark?)

No, so this is understandable. I've seen, one of the girls that works for me out at the village, she's real dark and you can tell she's an Indian at just a glance and had this girl come out there and she had blond hair and she didn't look like she had a one thirty second Indian blood in her and she said, she asked me, she called me, she knew I was Indian, asked me, said "Don is my sister in there?" "I said, "Is she on a tour with somebody?" She said, "No, she works in there." I said, "Who you looking for?" and she told me the girls name. And I just couldn't believe that they're both sisters.

(Full-blood sisters?)

That's what they say, I don't know if they were or not.

(Oh, well it could be.)

And I know about two or three people, Indian girls and boys that are in the same situation.

(Uh-huh)

We've got a family out there, The Smiths. Half of their kids look every bit Indian, well all of them do, but their light complected.

(Uh-huh)

And you can tell they're Indian real easy, whether they got black Indians or light or not, they got blue eyes.

(Ooh, I bet they're beautiful.)

They are, they're, the girls are real pretty. There's a girl and a boy and two boys. The girl is about eighteen and the boys are about 15-16 and another small one about 8 yr. old.

(Uh-huh, now this is in the village?)

Uh-hummmmmmm. So, you know this is . . . .
