

PHILOSOPHY CONCERNING FUTURE BLOOD-MIXING

Personally, I believe in another two hundred years there won't be one person that will really be an Indian.

(Well don't you think that perhaps that eventually we're all going to be kind of beautiful coffee cream color?)

It's possible, It's possible. (Laughter)

(I mean with, really, you know we've just gone to the moon, and I'm sure this is just a step going on out into the Universe.)

Stars and further out.

(And I'm sure it's going to be a very petty type of ignorant person that is going to look at someone and judge them by the color of their skin. It's coming to that now.)

Do you think we'll always have Black and White? Do you think we'll still be here?

(I think we're going to have some problems between Blacks and Whites but I don't think it's going to reach world-wide dimensions. And like I said, I believe we're all going to turn out to be a beautiful coffee-cream color myself. What do you feel like, as an Indian person looking on. . .you're kinda in the middle?)

I think it will all be Black or White.

(Do you really think so?)

As far as the U.S. is concerned, I do.

(You see that division coming?)

Well after you're older, your older Indians are going to die off.

(Well now Don, there's more people besides the Blacks and the Whites. There's also the Reds, the Browns and there's the Yellows.)

Uh-hummm.

(And there's those people in between, and I haven't forgotten about those people and surely to goodness you haven't, you're Indian.)

Uh-hum.
