

(Yeah.)

Right on the edge the golf course where his place is. Find anything?

(Unidentified voice): Not much.

That's where he lived. Didn't tell how he died or where he was buried.

Mrs. Mayes: Well, Uncle Sam Mayes' place is there as you go into-- out from Salina.

(And then something else I wanted to try to find out about. Two different people have told me that a long time ago right up this section line road here on--seems like it would be about a mile or so on south of Sam's Corner there, somewhere there was the old Vann place and that there was a cemetery up there.)

Mrs. Mayes: Yeah. That's the old Griggs place. That was my sister's allotment.

(Well.)

That's west, Jim.

Mrs. Mayes: Yeah.

Not south. Not south of Sam's Corner.

(It would be west then.)

You know, when you come off the shoulder of the bridge.

(Yeah.)

Go out there. There's a gravel road that turns and goes south.

(Yeah.)

It's right down about half a mile.

(Well.)

You run right into it.

Mrs. Mayes: There is so many children buried there.

(Well.)

Mrs. Mayes: Several of them. I guess there's no house there anymore.

There is a sign says man born of woman has days full of trouble.

I ain't been down there. I don't think. See, the government owns all that now. The road is theirs.
